

French banks are not exposed to Greece

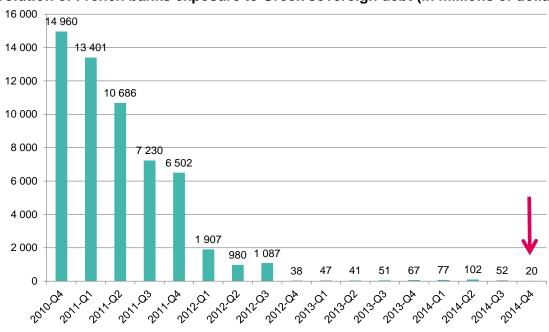

- French banks are not exposed to Greece: total exposures amount to $1,647 million at the end of 2014 according to the Bank for International Settlements.
- Following the European sovereign debt crisis in 2011, French banks eliminated their exposure to Greek sovereign debt, which amounts to only $20 million 2014 compared to $14.9 billion at the end of 2010.

Total exposures (banks, sovereign debt, private sector) of French banks to Greece at the end of 2014 (in millions of dollars)

Source: Bank for International Settlements

Evolution of French banks exposure to Greek sovereign debt (in millions of dollars)

Source: Bank for International Settlements